Note from the Editor

EARN MONEY BY WRITING FOR NATIONAL VANGUARD

Reader feedback is urgently required on two levels: firstly, the editor would like to know if readers enjoy the split between ‘in-depth articles’ and hard news, or if more space should be given to one or the other.

Secondly, we are of course always looking for more writers, so please submit them in e-mail or on a disk. The publishers have decided to offer yearly cash prizes for the best ‘investigative journalistic’ article submitted: first prize will be $250, second prize $100.

All articles we use become the property of National Vanguard Books unless otherwise stated, and we are not responsible for items mailed to us, so please have copies made.

We welcome manuscripts or articles: please send them to the address above.

The symbol which appears in the NATIONAL VANGUARD logotype is the Life Rune. It comes from an ancient alphabet, or futhark, used in northern Europe for many centuries before the general adoption of the Roman alphabet. The Life Rune signifies life, creation, birth, rebirth, and renewal. It expresses in a single symbol the raison d’etre of NATIONAL VANGUARD and of the movement of Aryan renewal.

THE GLORY OF ROME: One of the Greatest Eras of Our Race

There is hardly a person alive who has not heard of the civilization of Rome nor of at least some of its outstanding leaders: Julius Caesar, Octavian Augustus, Hadrian, Nero . . . yet too few people realize the huge debt which the entire modern world owes this great White civilization.

It is no exaggeration to say that our European civilization would not have been the same without the influence of the Romans, both physically and intellectually.

Spectacular modern cities, not the least of which was Rome, were founded by this great nation. London, for example, the capital of the United Kingdom, was founded by the Romans under the name Londinium. The ancient German city of Cologne was founded by Romans as Colonia Agrippina, to name but two prominent examples. Yet it not only in military conquest or empire building that ancient Rome showed its greatness: its legacy extends far further.

Latin – the father of many modern European languages

French, Italian, Portuguese, Rhaeto-Romantsch (spoken in the Canton Grison in Switzerland), Rumanian, and Spanish area all direct descendants of the language of Imperial Rome. English and German draw much of their etymological origins from Latin: a modern example rarely appreciated is the word “video” which comes directly from the Latin word to “see.” Another less well known Latin origin word is ambulance (“ambulare”) amongst hundreds more.

A model of the city of Rome, showing the Circus Maximus and the Coliseum. The model is located in the Museo della Civiltà Romana, a museum built by Benito Mussolini in the 1930s.

The Alphabet

When we use the phrase “Easy as A-B-C” we are actually referring to the Roman alphabet. This is the alphabet which the Western World – read the White World – has adopted and, as a result, is the lingua franca of the civilized world. Although there have been a few minor changes – such as the letter “W” being added to it, the alphabet we use is virtually identical to that in which the great Caesars of old wrote.

The Twelve Tables and the Justinian Code

Roman law developed many of the ideas of justice which we today take for granted. The Roman “Twelve Tables” were created in 451 BC, and were modified by the later Emperor Justinian, who refined Roman law into the Justinian Code in AD 529. These laws form the basis of all today’s justice systems in the Western World.

Sports Stadiums

The largest sports stadium in Rome was the Circus Maximus, which could seat up to 300,000 people and could be filled with water to re-enact sea battles between regular sized ships. The Circus Maximus was built in the 6th century B.C. and stood for centuries before being broken up to build Christian Churches, but to this day its remains stand as a tribute to what was the largest sports stadium ever built anywhere in the world, unequalled to this day.

The Circus Maximus was far larger than the far better known Coliseum, but the latter building is more famous because it has survived almost intact into the modern era. The Coliseum could hold a mere 50,000 seats when originally built, and was completed in 81 AD. It was built by the Flavian Emperors, and its proper name was the Flavian Amphitheater, and only took the name Coliseum from a huge statue of the Emperor Nero which once stood nearby.

Medical Advancements

The Roman doctor Galen was the first to describe many illness symptoms and treatments, and the medical textbook he wrote was the standard for over a thousand years. Galen was

Race or Religion? - The Genetics of Judaism

It is a question which has vexed people aware of the Jewish Question from the earliest times: Are Jews a race, a religion, or, as some distinguished writers have suggested a “race of the mind”?

Jews and their supporters have long since adopted the tactic of alternatively denying that Jews are a race – this in order to u n d e r m i n e accusations of group behavior – or have pleaded that they are a race – hence the “anti-Semitism” which seems to so often rear its head.

Professional anthropology has traditionally been reluctant to give racial status to the Jews. The primary reason for this is of course that many of these “anthropologists” have been Jews themselves, but that is another matter. Almost none of the Gentile anthropologists today will even admit that there is such a thing as a “Jewish race” although Carleton Coon found definite uniformity of cephalic indexes, facial structure, and coloration among Russian and Polish Jews, who account for 80 percent of the American Jewish population. (Coon, The Races of Europe, pp 643-644).

Historical Accounts of Jewish Origin

Historically speaking, Jews are Semites, a genetically distinct category which some have classed as belonging to the “near Eastern branch of the Mediterranean Race.” (Robertson, The Dispossessed Majority, p30). Doubtless, true White racially conscious Mediterraneans will take issue with this, as their ire is indeed justified by the latest genetic research, as outlined below.

It is however, true that when Jewry was dispersed during their “disapora” from the Middle following the Roman smashing of the Jewish rebellion in 70 AD, two distinct genetic types of Jews have emerged: the Sephardic and Ashkenazim.

The Sephardic Jews were scattered along the coast of North Africa and penetrated

Spain and Portugal, rising to high positions within those countries during the Moorish invasion of the Iberian Peninsula. The Sephardic Jews largely retained their olive skin and long headedness of the original Semitic origin, and possibly are the most “stereotypical” Jews the average gentile thinks of when the word “Jew” is mentioned.

The Ashkenazim Jews, on the other hand have, by their deeper penetration of Europe, and Eastern Europe in particular, acquired a lighter coloration and even blondism due to admixture with Europeans, and display a degree of round headedness, probably from intermarriage with Armenoids and Alpine Slavs.

Another important element – which was widely debated in both Jewish and anti-Jewish circles – was the influence of the Khazar tribe, a Near Middle Eastern grouping located in the deep south of Russia bordering onto the Middle East. This tribe converted to Judaism en masse and, according to the “Khazar theory,” consequently contributed a large portion to the Ashkenazim gene pool. Until the science of genetics came into its own, this theory remained one of the most hotly debated topics in the history of Ashkenazim Jewry.

Genetic Studies Clear the Air

The first genetic studies of male Y-chromosome, female mtDNA, and autosomal markers of Jews from around the world, have now conclusively demonstrated

Columnist BOB WHITAKER Speaks His Mind on Conservatives

If Hitler Hated Jews, Then All Our National Spokesmen Hate Whites

A German Nazi in the 1930s could look you straight in the eye and tell you he didn't hate Jews. Many a Nazi could honestly say that some of his best friends had been Jews.

Nazis did not identify their emotion toward Jews as "hate." They were just acting for the common good. You say this is crazy? Then let us look at WHY you say this is crazy. You say Nazis hated Jews because Nazis said that no place on earth was a good place unless it was "Judenfrei" (free of Jews).

Today you are a racist unless you want EVERY White country to import Asians and Africans and mix with them. You are a racist unless you demand that ONLY White countries import other races and mix with them: "Africa for the Africans, Asia for the Asians."

Unless you are a racist, you demand all that immigration and intermarriage because it will "solve the race problem." But this "race problem" will not be "solved" in Africa or Asia. The "race problem" will be solved when ALL White countries and ONLY White countries are brown.

If you're not a racist, you want a "White free" world. That's not hate, that's Idealism.

The hippies' line was, "The White race is the cancer of history." But absolutely nobody will call that hate. The hippies were Young Idealists.

Harvard Professor Noel Ignatiev put it best: "The goal of abolishing the White race is on its face so desirable that some may find it hard to believe that it could incur any opposition other than from committed White supremacists."

That's not hate, that is what we pay teachers to teach. Another reason you insist that Nazis hated Jews is because Nazis never attributed anything good to Jews, and they blamed all evil things on the Jews. When America landed on the moon, the speech had to say that it was "a great step for Mankind." All the food, medical miracles, and everything else that White people produce is officially the product of "mankind." If you say that "Whites" did anything good, you are a racist.

But the Nazis did give the Jews credit for doing things, bad things. And only a racist today does not give Whites credit for doing every bad thing that ever happened. Whites had slavery. Whites invaded other continents. You know the drill. If you don't know the drill, then you are a racist.

In Nazi Germany, more Jews were turned in by other Jews than by any other group of people. In the world today, Whites are required to lead the charge against Whites. We're all Nazis now. The only thing that has changed is who the Jew is.

O'Reilly Agrees: The Only Point of Integration is to get Rid of Whites

Every respectable conservative agrees with Ignatiev. To prove his respectability, O'Reilly of "The O'Reilly Factor" went ballistic about White Georgia students who held their own prom.

As O'Reilly knows, integration is not about equal educational opportunity. Among liberals the discussion goes straight to interracial sex.

O'Reilly says that if the races don't dance together, it is Evil. He says that since this is called the "United" States, mixed dancing is mandatory. O'Reilly says that American patriotism requires interracial dancing. O'Reilly says that American soldiers died in Iraq for mixed dancing. O'Reilly is a sicko.

How Did O'Reilly Get so Screwed Up?

It took a long, long time for the alcohol and drug recovery experts to admit that alcoholism is hereditary. Social sciences hate heredity, since what they sell is environment.

The Power Struggle within National Socialist Germany

by Shaun Walker,
Chairman, National Alliance

“One People, One Nation, One Leader” was the propaganda drumbeat of Nazi Germany. In fact, there was only one leader, however, the nation, the people, and the NSDAP itself were divided up into competing factions.

The National Socialist (NS) movement in Germany, which officially began in 1919, had much deeper roots in Europe within many organizations founded long prior to Adolf Hitler’s rise to power.

These disparate groups had very little to do with each other, but were a major influence on many of the Germans who later would rise to high political office in NS Germany. There were three main categories: the anti-Semitic groups; the Germanic folkish groups; and the Asatru groups<sup>1</sup>.

The anti-Semitic groups wanted to rid Germany of Jews. The Germanic folkish groups were also anti-Semitic, not from a political angle, rather from a cultural and biological perspective. They also wanted to change the society of Germany to re-incorporate many of the old traditions into everyday life by implementing a social revolution. The Asatru groups were also folkish, but they were anti-Christian as well. They believed Christianity was a foreign Middle-Eastern religion that when introduced into Europe, had derailed the folkish ways of Germanic antiquity. They wanted to completely rid Europe of Christianity and replace it with the Asatru, which they considered to be the true religion of the Germanic people.

Although all three of these groups had no political power, their ideas received a wide circulation although they always kept out of the mainstream politics. In 1918, most of the Asatru groups were united by Guido von List into a respected group called the Thule society.

As World War One ended, Germany was thrown into turmoil. The Communists, led by the Spartacus League, attempted military coups in Berlin, Bremen, and Munich.

A supporter of the Thule society, named General Franz Ritter von Epp, had, since 1918, formed a paramilitary army called the Freikorps (free corps) which was made up mostly of ex-war veterans who were sympathetic to the ideas of Thule.

General von Epp used his private army to crush the Communist uprising. Since the Communists used the exact same German Army uniform that the Freikorps used, the Freikorps painted the swastika<sup>2</sup> on the back of the helmets to distinguish the uniforms. This was the origin of the NS movement’s use of the swastika. Gen. von Epp made early contact with Hitler after crushing the Spartacus League, but he kept it a secret, as the Army was highly critical of the new nationalist groups which were springing up at that time.

Many of these nationalist groups were just reactionary cliques who only wanted to restore the Kaiser and regain the German borders of 1914. Most of these groups were being spied on by the Army, and a decorated combat veteran<sup>3</sup> named Corporal Adolf Hitler was sent to spy on a group called the German Workers Party (DAP) in 1919. However, instead of a reactionary group, Corporal Hitler found there an embryo of a political party which convinced him to leave the Army and start to build up a political movement to implement his own ideas.

Hitler’s initial following was mainly the Thule society people<sup>4</sup>, those who made up the Freikorps and a number of ex-war veterans. The DAP was originally just a nationalist organization that also had a folkish platform, which is what attracted Hitler to it in the first place.

The DAP was centered in Bavaria at this stage, but it attracted the attention of the Communists who

WHITE CONSERVANCY

Riley glanced down at the odometer, then at the hand drawn map that the attorney had given him and decided that the unmarked dirt road coming up on his left must be the one that would go up the holler to his grandfathers property.

The attorney had written to Riley a couple of weeks earlier and informed him of his grandfather's death. Riley had met his father's father only a couple of times, and could barely remember him.

The dirt road was tortuous, and Riley put the rental car in low gear as he started up the narrow twisting ruts. It was October and the mountains were a psychedelic collage of color. Riley remembered coming up here with his father one summer and how green and otherworldly it all seemed.

The estate he had inherited was one hundred and sixty acres of almost inaccessible mountains and a one room cabin without electricity or running water. There was no money in the estate. The property was about fifty miles from Beckley, West Virginia; too steep to farm, too remote to develop, and in the only state in America that was losing population. Riley had just broken up with the girl he had lived with for the previous two years and had quit his job, so getting away from it all seemed like a good idea.

When Riley asked the Buckley attorney where his grandfather was buried, the attorney had told him to ask Thearl about it. The attorney explained that Thearl was a neighbor who had taken care of Grandpa Langhorne when the old man got too stove up to care for himself.

The road ended in front of the cabin. A man was sitting on the porch; there were no chairs. He was sitting on the porch with his legs dangling over the edge. He was big, with a full, bushy beard, long wild hair, and he was wearing bib overalls over a faded flannel shirt. When Riley got out of the car the big guy stood up, smiled, stuck his hand out and said, "You must be Riley. I'm Thearl."

Thearl led Riley over to the hand pump, primed it, and pumped while Riley drank from the spout. When they came back and sat on the edge of the porch Riley said, "The attorney told me you took care of Grandpa the last few years. Thank you for that. I guess I shoulda been here but..."

Thearl: "You don't have to thank me. Hell, I loved that old man. Your Granddaddy was one cool dude."

Riley: "Where's he buried?"

Thearl: "If you're up for a little walk, I'll show ya."

They walked around to the back of the cabin and when they passed the outhouse Riley laughed and said, "I remember this. I was afraid to go in there. I stuck my head in the door and saw that deep, dark, stinking hole and went and took a leak behind a tree. I think it was the summer I turned ten."

They followed an old overgrown logging road up to the ridge line where the walking became easier and the view opened up. It seemed as if trees of every color covered the mountains for miles around.

Thearl: "This ridge is the property line between your Granddaddy's property and mine. My cabin is right down there. You can't see it from here, but it's there. I said your Granddaddy's property' I guess I mean your property now."

Thearl told Riley stories about his Granddaddy, and Riley was fascinated by the stories and by Thearl's soft, deep voice. His slight southern accent seemed to wrap around the words. At first glance, Riley had thought Thearl was older than him, but he soon realized that they were about the same age, mid twenties. Thearl's hard core hillbilly aura, and his look of lapsed maintenance made him seem older. They came to an outcropping of granite where shear-faced rock shot up forming narrow passageways. They wound their way through the rock maze and came out on a small grassy knoll. At the highest point of the grassy rise was a slab of stone four feet tall with crudely chiseled lettering: Barden Luther Langhorne 1916-2004. They stood before the headstone in silence listening to the wind for a few minutes before Riley said, "This is beautiful. But how'd you get him up here?"

Thearl laughed and said, "Well, let me tell ya, it weren't easy. And it involved a sled."

Riley: "Is this legal? To bury someone like this?"

Thearl: "I never thought about it that way. We were up here huntin a few years ago and came across this spot and he just set down and said, Thearl when the time comes I want ya to bury me right chere. And I said okay, so here he is."

Riley: "Well you sure did right by him."

Thearl: "What are you gonna do with your land?"

Riley: "I don't know. I'd like to try living up here but I don't know how I could get by. I just broke up with my girlfriend, quit my job, my neighborhood has gone to hell..." There
